Milliken May OK State Aid To Private Schools

LANSING (AP) — Gov. William Milliken said today he might be willing to approve a state tax increase this year to finance a program of state aid to nonpublic

"It depends on many factors," Milliken said during his first news conference since he was sworn in as governor Wednesday. He repeated a previous warning that if lawbreakers approve a costly parochial aid program, they must also provide revenue enough to finance it. The $1.51-billion general fund budget proposals Milliken announced Wednesday do not include funds for such a program, but still would spend more money than

About Legal Services

We hear some grumbling among members of the bar (our organization of lawyers) about Upper Peninsula Legal Services, Inc., but it never seems to emerge as a formal expression of dissent from our organization in best position to make a judgment on it.

Lacking such an expression, we are handicapped in an evaluation of this program started in 1966 to provide free legal services to persons who cannot pay for them.

Where criticism of the program surfaces and there isn't much of it that we have heard it seems to come mostly from lawyers who are busy and who have good incomes and it doesn't come clearly into focus. Where one lawyer may think that the free lawyers spend too much time on the road, others suggest that they aren't itinerant enough; one says they process too many divorces and another that they don't get divorces for the persons he sends to them.

The lawyers of the U. P. select 6 of the 15 directors of Legal Services, the poor select 6 and the other three are named by the circuit judges, probate judges and prosecuting attorneys. So the lawyers through their own organization have a large voice in control of this judicare pro-

Some of the criticism which Legal Services hears about itself from lawyers is that they would prefer Wisconsin's system of Judicare, in which private lawyers are paid for aid to the indigent. Nino Green, who has headed Legal Services, says his inquires to Judicare haven't brought many specifics about its experience so that a fair comparison could be made.

Acceptance of Legal Services - of government paid lawyers for the poor - requires some mental gymnastics for most of us. It can so easily appear outrageous to Puritan thinking that taxpayers would be burdened with the cost of an impoverished person's divorce that any judicare aid is suspect with many persons. They tend to regard divorce as a luxury.

But the poor don't. From their view the access to "legal" aid in their difficulties is the most basic human rights. They will manage. somehow, to get food, but to get a divorce to terminate a bad marriage or to set up a marriage to legitimatize a family of children is very diffi-

The biggest factor in this problem may be neglected in evaluating it. These people are not only impoverished, they are undereducated. This makes them difficult clients. They tend to be suspicious. They have often been victims of a credit system which has overburdened them with debt and which threatens to take their possessions to pay their bills. More education should have made them less likely victims of domestic difficulties of all kinds.

While our social welfare program works to educate our people, because that is their greatest hope of being able to be self-sufficient in today's economy, it is also attempting to protect them with such programs as Legal Services. Businessmen who have difficulty collecting their bills may regard it as government aid to deadbeats, but this is an oversimplification.

Essentially it is one more step into socialism, with the government undertaking to do for people what they used to do for themselves in the day when divorce was less acceptable and when people saved until they could buy something and did not accept more easy credit than they could repay

We're looking at a new concept of government responsibility for a legal system and it still is highly controversial and, although free, not fully used by the persons whom it is intended to aid. It seems to create an impression of government waste but there is no alternative proposal for the problems it works with nor any general inclination to deny that they exist and that they contribute to the anger of the poor.

LBJ Lingers

Officially, Richard M. Nixon assumed office as president on Jan. 20. In one profoundly important area, however, it will be a year to a year and a half before the new administration can really begin to take over from the old.

President Johnson's last major constitutional duty was to present the new Congress with a budget under which the government will be asked to operate from July 1, 1969, to June 30, 1970. Although Congress has the final say on spending and although the new president will not be without influence on Capitol Hill, the basic Johnson budget for fiscal 1970 is something the Nixon administration will have to live with — and accept responsibility for — for a full quarter of its term in office.

It is estimated that out of every federal dollar now scheduled for spending, the president has control over less than 30 cents. The balance has already been committed by previous acts of Congress or, like the interest on the national debt, is automatically provided for.

Rep. Wilbur Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has pointed out that because there are so many of these builtin growth factors, federal spending next year would go up by $7-$10 billion over this year's $185.1 billion without a single new appropriation bill being enacted. Even the most economyminded president can't get around that fact.

Well, President-elect Noon wanted the job. and it's waiting for him. Indeed, "lying in wait" might be a more accurate way to put it.

This, according to a University of Michigan authority, may be the normal pattern for all of us by the year 2000just 30 years from now.

Economist William Haber, adviser to the university executive officers and former dean said. of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, said our technological revolution will make old jobs obsolete and demand of us new knowledgewith the result that "commencement" will in fact be the beginning and not the end of one's education.

He spoke at a symposium in Ann Arbor on "The Corporation in Mid-Century America." presented by the university in association with Western Electric Co., Michigan Bell Telephone Co., and Bell Telephone Laboratories

"It is a devastating statistic to realize that many millions of Americans now hold 'deadend jobs'-jobs that are not going anywhere and which are disappearing every day," Ha-

He noted that more than 50,000 elevator operators were displaced by the push-button elevator in Manhattan alone in the period of a decade. Unskilled jobs in agriculture are almost gone, and the "great reservoir for the less educated which agriculture used to provide has disappeared."

The "bright future jobs." the U.M economist said, require more education, "These jobs are in the professions and the professional aides, in interior design, in beautification, in the arts, in research, in teaching and preaching, in public service—a vast expansion of jobs which have nothing to do with making things but are related to making life more tolerable for everyone.'

Haber cited some figures which indicate the scope of the technological revolution now going on: Outlays for research and development grew to $25 billion by 1965, an increase of more than 700 per cent in just two decades.

* * *

"The result has not only been the creation of a vast area of new products and materials, and a new methodology," he explained. "It has also created new markets and led to a vast explosion of knowledge simultaneously with a rather rapid obsolescence of knowledge We have probably advanced more in technological terms during the past 50 years than in the preceding 2,000 years."

Coupled with the research revolution-highlighted by the computer and by automationhas come a "revolution in skills," Haber said. "This is a service-oriented society. Since 1954 when the U.S. census first told us that more than half of the work force was engaged in providing services rather than in making things, the proportion of our people involved in production of goods has declined, and the proportion in provision of services has expanded.

Your recent article "Rail Firemen Issue" was ridiculous. Just because the presidential commission made one trip on a staged run everything ran perfectly. Why wouldn't it? With four engines and a handful of cars what entitled them to opine that a fireman does nohting!

I wish someone would write about trips when air box covers are blown off, tráction motors short out, engines run hot because cooling fans don't work and fuses blow and power is lost and railroads are tied up for miles when winter comes and the snow is heavy.

There are shorts in the high voltage cabinets and traction motors. These motors can be cut off but someone has to do the job while the engine is running in order to find the one shorted. Who is supposed to do

The traveling engineer who went on that staged fact-finding presidential commission

I also would like somebody to write about 16-hour days and nights with no fireman. The negineer gets square eyeballs. Even a horse isn't allowed to work that long in some states, also the junk power is so bad they had to loan seven engines from another road to get by. Thank God we have a few firemen left.

Hearing all the propaganda railroad management have put out nationwide one would think all on train employes were useless pretenses. But we are the only craft in the country that is indispensible when a strike

If there is any featherbedding just look at the time card of any class railroad. You'll find more management officials than there are setcion men between here and Green Bay.

Ann Landers

Different Set Of Rules For Husband

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest the letter from the woman who stumbled over two very close relatives in the backyard her husband and her sister. They were locked in loving embrace and the time was 5:00

Your advice was "forgive and forget - and then forget what you forgave." Neat phrasing, Ann, but easier said than done. And now I am writing to ask, what should a husband do when he stumbled over his wife and his boss, in his very own living room-asleep, the both of them, on the sofa at 3:00 a. m.?

True, I was not expected until the following day, but it's a fine How-Have-You-Been when a man can't go home without warning his wife in advance so she can clear the guy out.

Our marriage was a good one, or so I thought. We have three terrific kids — one in prep school and two in college. My wife doesn't want a divorce and neither do I. She claims Mr. X drove her home from a party and came in for a nightcap and they had too many My wife forgave me for a little affair three years ago and now she says it's my turn to be noble and compassionate. Somehow I think a man is entitled to an occasional indiscretion but a wife should live by a different set of rules. Maybe I'm oldfashioned but this is the way I see it. Please back me up. Thanks. - SHAFTED

There's A Better Way... to dry clothes

The FLAMELESS ELECTRIC way of course!

In fact drying clothes the FLAMELESS ELECTRIC way is the best way! Why go on hifting, lugging and hanging wet clothes week in and week out? A FLAMELESS ELECTRIC dryer will eliminate that weather-worry problem too and gentle electric heat is perfect for permanent press garments. What's more, an electric dryer costs less to buy and has fewer parts to service. It needs no pilot, no flue. See your dealer soon or stop by your local UPPCO office.

If the squeak does not appear to be coming from the area of a joist, but rather from the flooring between joists, it is likely that a strip of the finish floor is loose and is moving up and down when walked on. This movement can be eliminated by screwing the two layers of floors together. Again working from the underside, drive a screw upward through the sub-floor and into the finish floor. To be sure it does not go all the way through both floors, use a screw one-and-a-quarter inches long. Even then, check the finish floor to be certain it has not gone through.

You will have to use as many screws as necessary to halt the squeak, but usually two or three will do it. Because the finish floor is usually hardwood first drill a pilot hole to accommodate each screw. A third but lesser possibil-

Small Hospitals Hurt By Laws

ROYAL OAK (AP)-An official of one of the Detroit area's small hospitals says the existence of the tiny institutions may be in jeopardy because of problems in complying with Michigan's new hospital licens-

"We want regulations but we want them to take into consideration the realities of this business," says Earl J. Braxton, administrator of Oakland Center in suburban Royal Oak.

Oakland Center is one of seven small hospitals in the Detroit metropolitan area facing the difficulties. There are 10 small hospitals in the state which offer no maternity services and do not treat patients under public assistance programs.

Previously these hospitals required no state certification, as did Michigan's 241 other hos- and AIT training at Fort pitals. The small institutions Leonard Wood, Mo. He was were virtually exempt from state inspection.

Now, all the hospitals are checked for safety features and environmental aspects. State inspectors also look for compliance with federally assisted programs such as medicare, and a hospital must pass all tests or make requested improvements in order to renew its certification each year.

Braxton said the new law amounts to "confiscation of property.'

He said that the Greater Detroit Area Hospital Council, which is a regional planning 91st Congress. agency, "recommends bed planning and usually won't consider said he would draft the new leganything under 200 beds.
